

INSTRUCTIONS FOR COMPLETING PETITIONS FOR PROTECTION FROM ABUSE

The Domestic Abuse Assistance Acts (La. R.S. 46:2131, et seq. and Ch.C. Art. 1564, et seq.) and Protection from Dating Violence Act (La. R.S. 46:2151) enable victims of domestic and dating violence to ask for court orders to protect them from further abuse. This protection includes ordering the abusive person to stay away from the victim, and may also include ordering temporary child custody, financial support, and use of property to the victim in order to ensure safety.

The petition is the form that begins the process. The petition is an application, or a request to the court for protection from the abusive person. The petition describes the abuse, and lists the kinds of protection the victim is seeking from the court. The person who files a petition for protection is called the petitioner; the person against whom the petition is filed (the abusive person) is called the defendant. The petitioner can fill out and file the petition without using an attorney. The necessary forms are available in the clerk of court's office in each parish.

You do not have to pre-pay the court costs in order to file. If the protective order is granted, the judge should hold the abuser responsible for the court costs. However, if you do not proceed with your petition once it has been filed and set for hearing (for example, if you don't show up for court, or if you dismiss the petition), you may be held responsible for the court costs.

These instructions can help you understand which forms to use, and how to fill them out. In some areas of the state, the clerk of court's office or the local battered women's program may be able to assist you in filling out the forms.

Who may apply for protection under the Domestic Abuse Assistance Acts/Protection from Dating Violence Act?

Protective orders are available if you or someone in your family or household has experienced physical abuse, sexual abuse, or threats of abuse in a domestic or dating relationship. You can apply for protection for yourself, or you can apply on behalf of children or others in the home (see the relationships that are eligible for protection described below). You can file on behalf of an incompetent (also called an alleged incompetent) person, who is not capable of filing for him or herself due to a medical or mental disability.

The abuser may be any of the following:

- Spouse
- Former spouse
- A person presently or formerly living in the residence as a spouse, whether married or not
- Foster parent
- Dating partner
- Former dating partner
- Parent
- Child
- Stepparent
- Stepchild
- Foster child
- Adult child or grandchild

If the abuser does not fit one of the categories listed above, you may instead seek court protection under the laws which provide for general restraining orders, La. C.C.P. Art. 3601, et seq. Ask for the instructions (form LPOR Z) to fill out a petition (LPOR O) for a restraining order under that statute.

Where can you file your petition?

Venue means the place (parish) where you can apply for a protective order. There are several possibilities of where you can file the petition. You can apply to the court in the parish where the abuse happened, in the parish where the petitioner and defendant lived together, in the parish where the defendant is living now, or in the parish where the petitioner is living now. If those parishes are not the same, you must select one in which to file the petition. Once the order has been granted, it will be good throughout the state.

Which petition form should be used?

LPOR B: This petition offers protection from abuse under the Domestic Abuse Assistance Act (La. R.S. 46:2131, et seq.) or Protection from Dating Violence Act (La. R.S. 46:2151). You may use this petition if the relationship between you and the abuser is listed above under "Who may apply..." and if the parish you are filing in is one of the venue possibilities listed above under "Where can you file...."

LPOR B-R: This petition is the same as LPOR B except for the following circumstance. If the petitioner is married to the person that the petition is being filed against (the defendant), and if the defendant has filed for divorce but the divorce suit has not been finalized, OR if a petition for protection from abuse has been filed against you, use LPOR B-R. Because this petition will be filed as a part of the legal action that has already been filed, and because the abuser is known as the "Petitioner" in the previously filed legal suit, in this protective order request the defendant (abuser) will now be known as the "Defendant-In-Reconvention" and you, the petitioner, will be known as the "Petitioner-In-Reconvention." NOTE: This is only the case if the defendant is the one who first filed the divorce or protective order action. If you filed the divorce action, you may use LPOR B.

LPOR C: This petition offers protection from domestic abuse under a set of laws called the "Children's Code" (Ch. C. Art. 1564, et seq.), which uses slightly different definitions than those used for LPOR B. In courts that have jurisdiction over juvenile matters you may apply using this petition. It offers the same kinds of protection that are offered in LPOR B. You may use LPOR C for all the relationships between the defendant and petitioner that are described above under "Who may apply...." EXCEPT:

- 1) If a petitioner and defendant are unmarried but living in the same residence as spouses, a minor child must also reside in that residence and the petitioner and defendant must be currently living together;
- 2) If a petitioner and defendant are related as grandparents and grandchild, only LPOR B or LPOR B-R may be used.

You may use LPOR C for all the venues listed above under "Where can you file...." EXCEPT if the parish in which you are applying is where you currently reside, and that parish is not the location of any of the other venue options above. You can still apply using LPOR C in that case, but you will not have the same types of protection before the date of the hearing, which are available if you file using LPOR B or B-R.

LPOR C-R: This petition is the same as LPOR C except for the following circumstance. If the petitioner is married to the person that the petition is being filed against (the defendant) and if the defendant has filed for divorce but the divorce suit has not been finalized, OR if a petition for protection from abuse has been filed against you, use LPOR C-R. Because this petition will be filed as a part of the legal suit that has already been filed, and because the abuser is known as the "Petitioner" in the previously filed legal suit, in this protective order request the defendant (abuser) will now be known as the "Defendant-In-Reconvention" and you, the petitioner, will be known as the "Petitioner-In-Reconvention." NOTE: This is only the case if the defendant is the one who first filed the divorce or protective order action. If you filed the divorce action, you may use LPOR C.

How can you get an order?

1. Fill out the forms using the instructions that follow (Petition and Information for Service of Process Form). As you will be swearing that what you have written in the forms is true and can be used as evidence in court, you must sign parts of the forms in the presence of a Notary Public. A Notary Public is a person who has the authority to certify that you signed a document. In most areas of the state, the clerk of court will provide the service of a Notary.
2. The clerk of court will direct your signed forms to the judge who will review your request. If the judge agrees that immediate protection is necessary, s/he will grant you a Temporary Restraining Order (TRO) with a date to come back to court for a hearing. The TRO will contain some or all of the requests you made in the petition. The TRO will be in effect until the date of that court hearing, up to 30 days.

3. The clerk of court should provide you with a copy of the petition and a certified copy of the TRO, which you should keep with you at all times. (You may wish to make additional copies of the TRO for your employer, as well as for schools, day care centers or sitters of any children listed in the petition.) The clerk of court should tell you the date and time of the hearing for your protective order (information which is also written on your TRO), and will give a copy of the petition and the order to the sheriff's office to serve the defendant. The defendant will be notified to be present in court on the date of the hearing. At the hearing the judge will decide whether to grant the requests made in the petition and issue a Protective Order (PO). It is not required that you have an attorney; you may represent yourself at the hearing. However, if you wish to be represented at the hearing, take your papers to an attorney, or contact the nearest family violence program, immediately after the petition is filed to find out whether legal representation can be provided.
4. On the date of the hearing, come to court with any witnesses you may have (people who know of or have observed the abuse you described in the petition). If you are representing yourself at the hearing, the judge may ask you to explain what orders you feel are necessary to protect you from further abuse. The abuser will be given an opportunity to respond. If you do not come to court on the date of the hearing, the temporary order (TRO) will expire, you will not be protected, and you may be charged for the court costs.
5. After the hearing, if the judge is satisfied that you need protection, s/he will sign the Protective Order (PO) which will now be in effect for up to 18 months if you filed LPOR B or LPOR B-R under La. R.S. 46:2131, et seq. or La. R.S. 46:2151, or up to 6 months if you filed LPOR C or LPOR C-R under the Children's Code. The judge may grant that certain parts the order (those related to staying away and not contacting the protected person) do not expire. If LPOR C or LPOR C-R was filed on behalf of a minor child who was sexually abused, the order that is granted is in effect until the child reaches the age of 18. You should again ask the clerk of court for certified copies of the order, and keep a copy with you at all times.
6. If a hearing officer presides at the hearing, the hearing officer will write his/her recommendation to the judge regarding whether you should be granted a Protective Order and what specific relief you should get. The hearing officer will give you a copy of this written recommendation and will also give a copy to the defendant. The hearing officer will give the recommendation to the judge also. If you do not agree with the hearing officer's recommendation, you must ask for a hearing before the judge following your hearing before the hearing officer. The defendant can do the same if the defendant is unhappy with the hearing officer's recommendation. The hearing officer's recommendation to the judge is NOT a protective order - only the judge can issue a protective order. However, your temporary restraining order (TRO) should still be good for 15 days after the hearing or until the judge signs the protective order, whichever occurs last. Before you leave court, make sure that your temporary restraining order expiration date is a date at least 15 days beyond the hearing in which you just participated. If either you or the defendant has objected to the recommendation, a new hearing will be held before the judge and you will need to attend that hearing to prove your case again. If the defendant does not object to the hearing officer's recommendation and if you do not object either, the judge will sign a protective order after the hearing before the hearing officer. Before you leave, find out who to call and when to check on whether a new hearing will occur or whether your Protective Order has been signed by the judge. Also, find out when and how you can get a certified copy of your Protective Order.
7. If you need to extend any of the expiring protections under the Protective Order beyond the period the judge granted, you must file a form to modify the Protective Order before it expires. The court will set a hearing, and the defendant will be served with a copy of the papers and ordered to be present at the hearing. You must be present at the hearing to tell the Judge why you need the Protective Order to last for a longer period of time. These forms are available from the clerk of court. Be sure to get a new copy of the order if the Judge grants the extension.

8. It is a crime to violate a temporary restraining order or a protective order. You may call the police when the order has been violated. You may also inform the court that a violation has occurred by filing a Rule to Show Cause Why the Defendant Should Not Be Held in Contempt. These forms are available from the clerk of court. When the contempt forms are filed, the court will set a hearing and the defendant will be served with a copy of the papers and ordered to be present at the hearing. You must be present at that hearing to tell the judge what the defendant did to violate the order.
9. You may not change on your own the terms or conditions of the court order. If it is necessary to change the Protective Order, a motion to modify the order must be filed with the court. The court will set a hearing and the defendant will be served with a copy of the papers and ordered to be present at the hearing. You must be present at the hearing to tell the Judge why you need to change the terms of the Protective Order. Be sure to get a new copy of the order if the Judge grants a modification.

How do you fill out the forms?

Petition Form Instructions:

In the upper left corner, fill in your name on the top line as petitioner (or Petitioner-In-Reconvention if you are using LPOR B-R or C-R) and the abuser's name as defendant (or Defendant-In-Reconvention in LPOR B-R or C-R). Leave the lines on the top right corner of the form blank.

Check  Initial Petition if you are beginning this court action.

Check  Supplemental and Amending Petition if you have previously filed a petition that has not yet been heard before the court, and you are filing this petition to change or add to that petition. On the first line of the petition under the heading, fill in your name and date of birth.

Paragraph 1:

If you are filing this petition on your own behalf, check  a. If you are filing on behalf of a minor child/children, check  b and fill in their names, dates of birth, and relationship to you. If you are filing on behalf of someone in your care who you believe is incompetent, check  c and fill in their name, date of birth, and relationship to you. If you check "b" or "c," be sure to include information in Paragraph 8 (Paragraph 7 in LPOR C and C-R) about the abuse of the child or incompetent person.

Paragraph 2:

If you do not want the abuser to know your current address check  a. If you choose  a you must also ask for and fill out a form called  Confidential Address Form. The clerk of court will file your address under seal and it will be kept confidential to the court. If you do not need to hide your current address, fill in  b and/or  c.

Paragraph 3:

Provide the information requested about the defendant.

Paragraph 4:

Check all of the places listed that describe the parish you are filing this form in, and write the parish name in the blank for every one that you check. If you are using LPOR C or C-R, notice that if you check ONLY the last entry,  The petitioner resides in _____, you will be limited to choosing from options  a,  b,  c,  d, and  e listed in Paragraph 8. If you check the last entry, but also check any of the other entries, you are entitled to all the options listed in Paragraph 8.

Paragraph 5:

Place a check mark next to the relationship which best describes your relationship to the defendant (part ðaö), and/or the relationship of the person needing protection (part ðbö).

Paragraph 6:

Check whether or not there is a divorce action pending between the petitioner and the abusive person. If a divorce action is pending, please fill out the last page, Addendum. If you are filling out LPOR B or C, and there is a pending suit for divorce or order of protection that was filed by the defendant, you should use LPOR B-R or C-R instead. Check if there is a child custody case pending or a custody order in effect that involves children named in your petition. If you checked yes, there is a pending divorce, pending custody case, or custody order, be sure to fill out the last page, Addendum, with the details. Attach a copy of existing custody order, if one is available.

Paragraph 7 of LPOR B or LPOR B-R:

Indicate whether you and the defendant have a child in common.

Paragraph 7 of LPOR C or LPOR C-R, Paragraph 8 of LPOR B or LPOR B-R:

In ða,ö check all the forms of abuse that the defendant has used. In ðb,ö describe the most recent incident of abuse or threats of abuse which caused you to file this petition. Be specific; give the date and details about the abuse. If police were called, or if medical attention or other help was needed, include this information in your description. If you are filing on behalf of a child or incompetent person, describe the abuse to that person. Then describe past incidents of abuse. This is especially important to include if the most recent abuse was a threat.

Paragraph 8 of LPOR C or LPOR C-R, Paragraph 9 of LPOR B or LPOR B-R:

This paragraph lists all the things you may ask the judge to grant immediately, before the hearing. Check ðaö if you are asking that the defendant be ordered not to abuse, threaten, or follow you (or the protected person).

Check ðbö if you are asking that the defendant not contact you (or the protected person) in any way.

Check ðcö if you want the defendant to stay at least 100 yards away from where you (or the protected person) are staying, and fill in the address the defendant is to stay away from (if you have asked the court to keep your address confidential, do not list your address, but insert “anywhere petitioner may reside.”).

Check ðdö if you want the defendant to stay away from your (or the protected person's) school or job.

Check ðeö if you want the defendant evicted from the home so that you (or the protected person) may live there. Fill in the local Sheriff's office. NOTE: You can only check ðeö if you can check one of the four descriptions in ðeö to describe who owns or leases the house. However, you may be granted use of a house or residence solely owned by the defendant, if you are filing LPOR B. If you are asking for custody of a child or children of the defendant and want possession of the defendant's solely owned house or residence, check this option in Paragraph 10.

Check ðfö if you want the defendant ordered not to damage your (or the protected person's) property, and not to cut off your utilities, phone, or mail service.

Check ðgö if you (or the protected person) want to have or to use certain property or pets that are solely owned or leased by you (or the protected person), and fill in the current location of the property or pets. Also, check ðgö if you are asking for jointly owned or leased property or pets, and fill in the current location of the jointly owned property or pets. Explain why you are asking for the jointly owned property or pets. This is not intended to divide up all your shared property, but to grant you certain items that are important for you to have now for your safety or that of the protected person. Fill in the name of the local sheriff's department that will assist you in retrieving the requested property or pets.

Check ðhö to order both the protected person and the defendant not to give away, sell, or destroy any of the shared property.

Check ðiö if you are asking that temporary custody of the children, or the incompetent person needing protection, be given to the petitioner. List the children's or incompetent person's names in the blanks, as well as whose custody they are in now.

Check ðjö if you are asking for assistance from the Sheriff's office to get the children or incompetent person, and fill in the name of the local Sheriff's office. Check ðkö if you want the court to order the defendant not to interfere with custody of the children or incompetent person.

Check ðlö if you (or the protected person) want to return to the residence with law enforcement officers one time to get personal belongings, and write ðpetitionerö or your name in the blank. If you (or the protected person) are staying in the residence that was once shared with the defendant, check  and write in the defendant's name in the blank to allow him/her to return with law enforcement officers once ONLY to get personal belongings. Check  to ask the court to order assistance from the local Sheriff's office to accompany the person listed in  to the residence to get his/her belongings. Fill in the name of the local Sheriff's office.

Paragraph 9 of LPOR C or LPOR C-R, Paragraph 10 of LPOR B or LPOR B-R:

Check any of the items listed that you would like the judge to grant at the hearing. Unlike the things you have asked for in Paragraph 8 (LPOR C, or C-R) or Paragraph 9 (LPOR B, or B-R), these requests can not be granted until the hearing. Even though the judge signs your temporary order, these requests will not be in effect until the judge decides at the hearing whether s/he will grant them.

Paragraph 10 of LPOR C or LPOR C-R,

All of the options here are also listed in Paragraph 8. However, if you were limited in your choices in Paragraph 8 because of the venue, you have the opportunity in Paragraph 10 to ask for those things you could not ask for in Paragraph 8. The options in Paragraph 10 cannot be granted BEFORE the hearing, as a part of the TRO, but if you wish to have any of these options as part of the final protective order check them here.

Prayer: This section summarizes all that you are asking for. Place a check mark next to all items that apply. Sign your name on the line provided for the petitioner. Fill in the abuser's name and address on the line provided under "Please Serve Defendant." Make sure you give his/her home and/or work address (not a post office box) where s/he may be served in person.

Affidavit/Verification: This is the part of the form that must be signed in the presence of the Notary Public. By signing this form, you are swearing that all information you have given is true, that you believe that the defendant poses a threat to you, and that you understand that punishment (a fine and/or a jail sentence) can result from your giving false information in this petition.

Addendum: Fill out as much information as you can regarding your currently pending divorce action, pending child custody action, or child custody order. If there is no pending legal action or custody order, leave this page blank.

Information for Service of Process Form Instructions:

The clerk of court should provide you with a copy of this form. The defendant must be served by the sheriff's office with a certified copy of the petition, the order, and notice to come to court on the assigned day of the hearing. To assist the sheriff's office in locating the defendant, fill out this form as completely as possible. List all the places the defendant may be found, times s/he may be in those places, and other people who may know of the defendant's whereabouts. If the defendant is not located, and has not received a copy of the order and notice of the hearing, the temporary restraining order is not enforceable.

Confidential Address Form Instructions:

If you checked  in Paragraph 2 of the petition, you must fill out this form, which is available from the clerk of court. Your address will be kept confidential by the court and the defendant will not receive notice of where you are currently living.
